DIRECTOR'S NOTE

Patience is in some ways a paradox. It is at once both inex- tricably bound to the period in which it was written, yet timeless with its themes of hero worship and irrational popular fads.

The operaetta parodies the peculiar "Aesthetic" movement, which swept England (and to some extent the U.S.) in the late 1880's. The movement had its source in a small but influential group of rebel- lious writers who rejected the prevailing artistic wisdom and the adopted, instead, the old Italian masters as their ideals. They formed a "secret" society, self-dubbed the Pre-Raphaelite Brother- hood, and with their startlingly detailed techniques and antiquated subject matter, quickly turned the artistic world on its ear.

Their was a "blend of romantic idealism, scientific rationalism, and morality." This typically mid-Victorian mixture was itself a paradox. "How else can one explain a group of artists whose idea of modernity was to paint the Middle Ages?"

The Pre-Raphaelites' genuine and heartfelt objectives inspired creative minds in other genres as well, leading to the aesthetically earnest essays of John Ruskin, the ornate and flowery poetry of Algernon Swinburne and finally the flamboyant affectations of Oscar Wilde. Along the way, sincerity gave way to pretentiousness and "aestheticism" for its own sake was born. All of which, of course, provided ample fodder for Gilbert's acerbic pen.

In my personal opinion, Patience is one of Gilbert's Wittiest Libretti. It is a perfect blend of outrageous satire and improbable yet somehow endearing characters. Though obviously tied to its Victorian "aesthetic" roots, it nevertheless offers amusing insight into the cult phenomenon and hero worship very much evident in our own society.

SYNOPSIS

ACT I: The village maidens, despairing because their idol, aesthetic poet Reginald Bunthorne, is "cloy and cares for none," learn that Bunthorne loves Patience, the village milkmaid. Patience (who says she has never loved) announces that the 35th Dragoon Guards have returned to the village. This news fails to interest the newly "etherealized" maidens despite the fact that they were all engaged into these "fleshy men" the year before.

The dragoons arrive in fine martial style calculated to stir feminine admiration, only to find the maidens too engrossed with Bunthorne to notice them. Bunthorne, "alone and unobserved," reveals the truth: he is only posing as an aesthetic poet in order to get attention. Patience, rebuffing him, seeks guidance from lady Angela, who explains that True Love is always Unselfish. Angela's inquiries reveal that years before, Patience had loved her playmate, a little boy. An attentive stranger turns out to be this very playfellow - Archibald ("The Al Right") Grosvenor, a genuine aeth- ethe. Since loving so perfect a being would not require the unself- ishness specified for True Love, Patience sadly rejects him.

The maidens provide an aesthetic escort for the disconsolate Bunthorne who (by the advice of his solicitor) has decided to "put himself up to be raffled for." Interrupting the drawing, Patience offers her hand to Bunthorne. The maidens seek consolation with the dragoons, until the arrival of the true aesthetic poet, Grosvenor, unleashes a feminine "Florentine fourteenth-century frenzy."

ACT II: Lady Jane, the oldest maiden of them all, alone remains faithful to Bunthorne, hoping she will "reap her reward" before her charms decline. Grosvenor, hotly pursued by the enraptured maidens, tries to convince them of the hopelessness of their passion. Giving them the slip, he meets Patience, who confides that True Love with Bunthorne is less than idyllic. Without the adulation of the maidens, Bunthorne, too, is unhappy. Finding a staunch ally in Lady Jane, he resolves to beat Grosvenor "on his own ground." Meanwhile, the Colonel, Major, and Duke have reached a similar conclusion and are bent on winning back the admiration of the maidens by adopting aestheticism. Angela and Saphir are properly impressed, though the question remains as to which lucky girl should win the "great matrimo- nial fish" - the Duke. Bunthorne, by means of dire threats, forces Grosvenor to become commonplace. The surprising result is a general unaesthetic "transfiguration" which leaves the discontented Bunthorne with only a "vegetable love."

GLOSSARY

Colonel Calverly's "If you want a receipt..." requires at least a page to itself, and is annotated on the lobby board. The receipt (recipe) for a heavy dragoon (cavalry soldier) consists of characteristics of many famous people. The scum is removed, and the residuum (remainder) is the final product. Our colonel has substituted a few modern ingredients unknown to Gilbert.

Fleshly thing - something carnal or sensual

Bunthorne's poem Oh, Hollow! Hollow! Hollow: amaranthine asphodel means "undying lilies", and calomel, colocynth, and aloe are all laxatives derived from plants. The gist of the poem is the incompatibility of poetic and medicinal properties of flowers.

You are not Empyrean - Celestial

You are not Della Cruscan - school of poetry started by sentimental Englishmen in Florence in the eighteenth century.

Oh, South Kensington - Lady Jane is apostrophizing an artistic area of London including the School of Design and several museums.

When uttered in Hessians - military boots (from German state Hesse)

the peripatetics of long-haired aesthetics - wanderings yearning for Elysian Fields - Abode of the blessed, in Greek myth black Aceldama of sorrow - field of blood; originally the potter's field purchased with Judas's blood money.

Oh, Chronos, this is too bad of you - Greek word for time

Gaily pipe Pandean pleasure - refers to Pan, Greek pastoral god, who played Pan pipes.

With a Daphnephoric bound - Daphne, a nymph renowned for virgin timidity and shyness, was changed into a laurel tree to escape the attentions of Apollo. She presumably bounded as she ran.

with rouge, lip-salve, and pearly grey - a face powder

decalet - a ten-line poem

his placidity emetical - nauseating (or worse)

To stuff his conversation full of quibble and of quiddity - to make his conversation pompous and boring with hair-splitting.

half-bred black and tan - mongrel terrier dog, a low-class pet thinks suburban 'hops' more fun than 'Monday Pops' - prefers low-class dances to more high-brow classical concerts

A Chancery Lane young man, a Somerset House young man - references to Legal and Government office districts, respectively

Greenery-valley, Grosvenor Gallery - Green and yellow were colors favored by Pre-Raphaelites, who exhibited in Grosvenor Gallery

Sewell & Cross... Howell & James... Waterloo House... Madame Louise references to fashionable drapers and milliners shops (where Archibald and the women's chorus would be shop-clerks)

Our pain and our distress we find it is not easy to express -- After eight years of performing with the GSVLOC, Dorothea and David Jensen are leaving the Twin Cities, taking their charming and useful children with them. The family has been a model of "duty done and duty doing," contributing wit, talent, backstage labor, and a good house for a party. So, trained as we are in happy endings, we'll send them off "with joyous shout and ringing cheer!"

THE GILBERT & SULLIVAN VERY LIGHT OPERA COMPANY

Our next production is scheduled to be The Grand Duke (or, The Statutory Duel) in the Spring of 1991. This is the last show which Gilbert and Sullivan wrote, and is very rarely performed. Don't miss this once-in-a-lifetime opportunity! Tax deductible contributions to help support our season are always welcome.
